1. When not in use for a long time, try not to compress it and keep it as fluffy as possible. Proper drying is also a good method. The purpose of this is to maintain the nature of down and cotton and extend the service life.
2. when the sleeping bag is not warm enough, you can wear more clothes, or cover clothes and other items on the sleeping bag.
3. The sleeping bag is suitable for drying in a ventilated and dry environment, and avoid direct sunlight.
5. Please choose a dry and cool environment for daily storage, and make sure the sleeping bag is clean;
6. can not be stored in a compression bag, long-term compression will cause the down or insulation layer to lose its elasticity and reduce the thermal performance. It is recommended to use a free storage bag for storage, or you can use the bottom webbing to hang it in the closet.
7. Purchase another thin sleeping bag liner for the sleeping bag, and put it inside when using the down sleeping bag, so even if the body is very dirty, the liner that gets dirty first is the liner, which is more convenient to clean.
8. Don't wear very thick clothes to get into the sleeping bag, because it is not warm. It will be very comfortable to wear a set of thermal underwear and sleep in the sleeping bag, but remember not to wear cotton underwear to sleep in the sleeping bag. Overheating, sweat will wet cotton underwear, it is very uncomfortable to stick to the body.
9. You can fold the clothes in the warm layer into the sleeping bag a little, and you will not feel cold when you wear it the next day, but don't pack all your clothes into the sleeping bag, so as not to affect your sleep.
10. It is very important to have a good-quality moisture-proof pad. People who often camp have experience. If the cold air goes directly from the ground to the back, the cold is unbearable; if possible, drink a hot drink and milk before going to bed. which can make the body fever;
